Helping Bring Up the 'Medicine' For Enemy

BUTCHERING is Isidro Gonzalez's occupation when he is at home here with the Texas market, but for some time back he has been a wanderer with another sort of butchering outfit—the ammunition train of the Fifth American army division in France. He was drafted last year and went to Camp Travis, Tex., transferring from there to Camp Logan, Tex., and then to Camp Upton, N. Y. His mother, Mrs. Urbana Gonzalez, lives at 404 East Second street, El Paso. He has been in France since June.

Germans Using Mooney's Case In Propaganda

Condemned Man, However, Sends Cable Of Protest to Europe.

GIRARD, Kas., Aug. 29.—Efforts of German agents in Europe to use the Mooney case in their propaganda work in allied countries is condemned in a cable sent today to the commission of loyal soldiers of America, now in Europe, with the approval of president Wilson, by Thomas J. Mooney from his cell in San Quentin penitentiary, San Francisco.

The text of the cablegram was made public by Edmund H. Julius, editor of the New Appeal, a Socialist paper.

The cable was sent in response to an appeal from the socialist commission, which reported that the Mooney case was being used effectively by German propaganda in southern Italy. Mooney's cable follows:

"President Wilson does not do as he should in his power in his behalf to the end that I may receive fair treatment. I have full confidence that the efforts he has made, together with those of organized labor, will secure ultimate justice for me. While I am an associate of all people, I repeat, I abhor the idea that German propaganda should be made of my case, or of my situation, and I repeat that my confidence in the American government and people is not shaken."

Mooney is under sentence of death for alleged participation in the "preparation day" bomb explosion at San Francisco in 1914.

Lyndley Spencer Died A Hero's Death Officer Lauds First El Paso Victim

NINETEEN year old Lyndley Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Spencer, a resident of El Paso for the greater part of his life, was the first soldier of the El Paso City to give up his life for the cause of democracy.

He fell during a successful charge of the American troops in France on June 6, and the Spencer home, from which the young soldier had gone one year previous as a member of El Paso's own company K, was the first to be darkened since the war began.

He was buried in a "little orchard" near where he fell after the engagement, according to a letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Spencer from the commanding officer of company K, 30th regular infantry, of which young Spencer was a member.

An El Paso school student prior to his enlistment in the army, the young soldier had a wide circle of friends in this city. He was a victim of the Spanish influenza epidemic which began March 12, 1918, having charge of one of the big trucks that maintained the line of communications between the punitive expedition and the supply base at Columbus, Mich. He was killed while on duty.

Recently Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, who now reside at Canutillo, Tex., received a letter from Lieut. Terry D. Norcross, commanding company K, giving the particulars of the death of their young son. The letter is full of tender pathos, and sorrow for the death of a youthful soldier. It reads: Lieut. Norcross states:

"It is my painful duty to inform you that your son, Lyndley Spencer, has recently been killed while in action. Lyndley was one of my men and as I was with him at the unfortunate moment I am glad and proud to say that he died as only a good soldier can, in the proper discharge of his duties."

The captain said there were 100,000 Americans at the front and 700,000 behind the lines.

The recent progress of the allies was attributed to the mass employment of tanks which had yielded initial success but, he declared, means now had been found to master them.
